In many developing countries, manufacture industry <sup>6</sup> extensively uses ~~like a huge~~ amount of child labors <sup>7</sup> to keep the low cost of human resources, since wages for children are cheaper and children tend to be more obedient than adults under strict environment<sup>8</sup>. A majority of them <sup>9</sup> are exploited due to unreasonably long working hours, but extremely low wage and high danger of the work. In my view, forcing children under this kind of working environment is completely ~~undesirable~~<sup>10</sup> wrong / unjustifiable.
